

Pete Gioconda

Some people make shopping mall music. Big, calm, blandly elegant. Somewhere to pass the time and feel comfortable. Pete does not make that kind of music. He makes the music of cobblestone streets, winding alleys, shady lanes. Dimly lit bars. The music of cold, still dawns. Of desolate, wild country.

PETE GIOCONDA is a unique, edgy singer, a protest poet with penchant for historical reference. This mix of punk and psychedelic-folk teases the audience to take sides . . . like a Johnny Rotten (who hasn't slept in four days) meets Times they are a-changin'-era Dylan and strolls into Cat Power's bedroom for consolation.

Pete has taken the empty culture of materialism and is attempting to untangle it. His song Hey You (Out with Shopping Bags) has acquired new meaning in the wake of recent looting. Shadow shopping. The unseen forces which control our perception, which leave us "dreaming of money gods", form the subject of Wake Up or Be Captured. "In one sense, 1970s punk had it easy," Pete comments. "All it had to do was attack nice fluffy hippies. It's much harder now, because mainstream youth culture is filled with aggressive patsies of consumerism. Being aggressive back doesn't work. I've tried. It just makes minds smaller."

Learning to See (album) contains songs fused from new wave, pop & folk/rock influences, mingling poetic lyrics with a punk attitude and playful unpretentiousness.

PETE GIOCONDA

LEARNING TO SEE

Learning to See

1. Heaven's Wild Flower rocky
2. Darkened Images indie pop
3. We Are Real sci-fi folk
4. Little Monkey ska-pop
5. Lazybones
6. Alien Cat Lover folk rock
7. Eyes folk blues
8. Molly G folk/rock
9. Queen of the Future dance rock
10. Learning to See visual folk
11. Save Your Dreams surreal folk
12. The Charm of Making anthem rock
13. Golly Gee reprise
14. Maaan

Pete's poetic style is influenced by the freedom he found hitching and wandering in his 20s, and by his love of classic literature. His aim is to merge story, theatre and poetry with his music and songs. Pete performed many Bristol-written songs live on BBC3 TV's "Upstaged", as guest of performance artist/musician Badgertrap.

Youthful songs of mischief, desire, loss and sadness, plus transcendent perceptions.

New album out on iTunes & Amazon

free tracks www.petegioconda.com

facebook.com/petegiocondamusic twitter.com/petegioconda

email music@petegioconda.com